Role of Services in International Trade

Service sector is the largest contributor to the world economy, as it accounts for nearly 70% of global GDP, 60% of world employment and 46% of global exports measured in value-added terms, yet there is further scope for enhancement. At present, the growth of the service sector across the globe is highly uneven. While in the developed countries the service sector has witnessed rapid progress, in many developing and least developed countries (LDCs), the service sector's value added contribution to the overall economy remains relatively low. This is largely because world-over several services have not been able to penetrate across sectors.

MVIRDC World Trade Centre Mumbai and All India Association of Industries are organising 8th Global Economic Summit on Services: Enabler of Growth for Trade and Industry at World Trade Centre Mumbai from 6th – 8th March 2019.

- GES will engage policymakers, international experts in multilateral organisations, MNCs, academicians and industry experts to deliberate on enhancing MSME competitiveness by integrating services to enhance economic and business competitiveness.
- The Summit will also showcase opportunities for small, medium and large organisations to integrate services in enhancing manufacturing and agriculture sectors.
- It will also help governments to enhance their contribution in global services by adopting various social and policy initiatives as well as advancements in information and communication technologies.

Services, value added (% of GDP)

According to the World Bank, services constitute over 2/3 of global GDP and 51.1% of total employment worldwide. Over the past 25 years, the 'Trade in Services' has emerged as the most dynamic segment of international trade. Latest WTO report has pointed that at a global level, Europe and Asia are the two regions with the highest levels of services trade within their regions. A total of 64 per cent of Europe's services exports and 52 per cent of Asia's exports are destined for their respective regions, whereas for Africa, services trade within the region accounts for less than 10 per cent of total services exports. This shows tremendous potential for LDCs and developing countries to grow.

Further, the world trade analysis shows that countries with efficient service infrastructure (as shown in the graph) displays higher productivity in manufacturing and agriculture (export oriented) sectors. Countries like US, Japan, Germany and South Korea have demonstrated this successfully.
